

Birmingham City Centre

England's Waterways Guide

Birmingham's canal network is one of the most famous and intricate in the world. Originally built for industrial transport over 200 years ago, the canals were the life-blood of Victorian Birmingham and the nearby historic Black Country.

In many areas, such as Brindleyplace, the canal network has been revitalised as a popular place to work, live and socialise, with canal side bars, restaurants, art galleries and boutique shops.
